

1870. The first of these was the "Great Famine" of 1847-1850, which was caused by a combination of factors, including a severe drought, a lack of food, and a lack of money to buy food. The second was the "Great Famine" of 1879-1880, which was caused by a combination of factors, including a severe drought, a lack of food, and a lack of money to buy food. The third was the "Great Famine" of 1896-1897, which was caused by a combination of factors, including a severe drought, a lack of food, and a lack of money to buy food.

The first of these was the "Great Famine" of 1847-1850, which was caused by a combination of factors, including a severe drought, a lack of food, and a lack of money to buy food. The second was the "Great Famine" of 1879-1880, which was caused by a combination of factors, including a severe drought, a lack of food, and a lack of money to buy food. The third was the "Great Famine" of 1896-1897, which was caused by a combination of factors, including a severe drought, a lack of food, and a lack of money to buy food.